Dynamics of Commercial Development in Georgetown

Betsy Cooley and Karen Cruse

Two of the movers and shakers of Georgetown commercial development spoke to a standing-room-only crowd at CAG’s November 5 meeting at Pinstripes. Developer Anthony Lanier of EastBanc and Joe Sternleib, CEO of the Georgetown Business Improvement District (BID), regaled the audience with 50 non-stop minutes of information, slides and repartee.

Lanier said “Georgetown is something that is a village within a city — that separates Washington from every other place and makes it very, very special. It is the most unique village on the face of the earth.” Joe Steinleib said “I only have 70 slides so we are going to go really fast… buckle your seat belts and here we go!” What followed was a fascinating discussion of current and future projects and an explanation of the retail and restaurant dynamic in Georgetown.

Mr. Lanier explored the greatest assets and challenges for a developer doing business in Georgetown. Primary among them is the designation of Georgetown as a historic district. While this is obviously one of the community’s most important points of pride and definition, it comes with certain drawbacks, such as rules and regulations governing construction that do not apply elsewhere. The costs to deliver new and renovated space are also substantially higher than in other parts of the city. Lanier said “This is a huge challenge, one that must be met if we are to become commercially relevant.” Mr. Lanier estimates that less than 50% of stores are commercially viable and national chains support a large percentage of the retail sector. That being said, many stores that appear as national brands are, in fact, locally owned and operated, as is 80% of Cady’s Alley.

Such alleys are a side of Georgetown that Lanier wants to see better utilized. He views them as “one of our great treasures. . .commercial areas that have a human scale”.

Mr. Sternleib talked about projects undertaken by the BID. Some are specific. For example, they are working with the nine galleries on Book Hill to re-establish the area as the place to buy art in Washington. There has also been an intense effort to bring a much-desired bookstore to Georgetown. Sternleib said he approached Politics and

As 2014 draws to a close, I want to reflect on how our community has for the last 12 months benefitted from the volunteers and staff of the Citizens Association of Georgetown. It has been a particularly productive year thanks to the participation of over 1200 members, 13 board directors, 13 committee chairs, 100+ committee members and one legal advisor.

Beginning in January, our monthly community meetings have brought together well over 100 friends and neighbors at each meeting. The year kicked off in January with a very special reception at the Evermay Estate hosted by Dr.s Kuno and Uno. February was the popular CAG Art Show at House of Sweden. March offered us an informative meeting on the health of the Potomac River at Long & Foster. April we met at the Historic Renwick Chapel in Oak Hill Cemetery. May is our Annual Meeting and Dumbarton House generously hosted us. That evening we presented awards for exceptional service to CAG and to the community to Bill Starrels, Walter Groszyk, Jennifer Steingasser, Joe Sternlieb and the BID, and parking officer Steven Sparks. After a summer break, during which families and CAG members enjoyed our Concerts in the Parks series, we kicked off September with a Candidates and Commentators evening. November followed with a standing-room-only crowd at Pinstripes to hear the latest on commercial development in Georgetown from Joe Sternlieb and Anthony Lanier.

These community meetings are a wonderful way for new residents to learn about what makes Georgetown tick and to make friends with people who care about this community. Many of our organization’s volunteers are first introduced to CAG through these meetings. I urge everyone to invite a new neighbor to attend a meeting during 2015.

Much of what we do, as we follow our mission, is of a serious nature, with long-range implications for all of us. Attending Advisory Neighborhood Commission (ANC) 2E and Old Georgetown Board (OGB) meetings enables us to weigh in on projects, both residential and commercial, and often to support neighbors who want their voices heard. It seems like two issues in particular have demanded many hours of thought and work for more years than I want to consider — the rewriting of the DC zoning regulations (with a customized zone for historic Georgetown) and legislation to assure neighbors are notified officially when property abutting or fronting their property is in the concept stage for alterations.

If you read our web site you know we are also heavily involved in Public Safety concerns, Georgetown University issues, the planting of trees through Trees for Georgetown, alcohol beverage control issues, historic preservation, parking, transportation, and trash and rodent issues. We are always seeking more volunteers to join us. As the New Year rings in, please consider calling Betsy Cooley, Executive Director, at 202-337-7313, and offer a few hours weekly to ensure Georgetown continues to be a wonderful place to live. Your will enjoy getting to know us.

Have a peaceful holiday season and best wishes for the New Year.

Let The Stories Begin -- Again!

Mark your calendar for the annual CAG Panel of Oral History Pioneers at the City Tavern Club, 3206 M Street NW. On Tuesday, January 13, join CAG to hear from a fascinating group of Georgetowners who have recorded their recollections about Georgetown in one-on-one interviews for CAG’s Oral History Project. Come and meet these living Georgetown legends and hear some of their intriguing – and funny – stories first hand. Optional dinner at the City Tavern Club will follow.

Prose to locate here. There is definite interest, particularly in the middle section of Wisconsin Avenue. However, the stumbling block for them, or for other independent book-sellers, is high rent. Nonetheless, Sternlieb continues to explore all avenues, including percentage rents and crowdfunding. As he says: “It’s possible; it’s just difficult”.

In a more experimental vein, the BID has focused on the “pedestrian experience”. On several occasions, parking spaces have been converted to “parklets”, effectively widening sidewalks for a more comfortable and easy stroll.

A full-house at Pinstripes for CAG’s November meeting

Asked about the seriousness of a proposed gondola across the river, Sternlieb said: “You think I’m kidding? The BID has already raised $130,000 and has requests to Arlington and the District for an additional $70,000 to complete a feasibility study for the aerial lift to Rosslyn. The gondola would carry as many as 4,000 people per hour, remove cars from the street – and imagine the view!”

Then And Now

Edith Schafer

W

ho remembers Helen Hokinson these days? She was a leg-denary cartoonist for the New Yorker who “specialized in to do, plump and ditsy society women” who belonged to clubs. She made much of their foibles and rituals, she was indeed and she got it just right. She was extremely successful and her cartoons kept appearing well after her death in a plane crash in 1949.

Why are we bringing her up now? Because things have changed and we need to up date the image of garden clubs and their members. The problem is that those of us who remember her wonderful cartoons may still feel slightly defensive about belonging to groups like garden clubs. Maybe it makes us feel plump and ditsy.

That is an inaccurate description of garden clubs and their members today; now it’s a very different story. Here in Georgetown the garden club makes its contribution to our community in many ways, both visibly and behind the scenes. It is completely up to date. It has given away more than half a million dollars to beneficiaries which include Montrose Park, Volta Park, Rose Park, the Georgetown Public Library, Book Hill Park, the Georgetown Waterfront Park, Trees for Georget-town, Tudor Place, Dumbarton Oaks Conservancy Park, and the Student Conservation Association. This last organization every year sends teams of inner city kids to work on stream restoration in Dumbarton Oaks Park. This is good for the kids and good for us.

Garden Clubs make a difference. The plump and not so plump ladies have gotten a bit away from flower arranging, although they still do that very well and there is a need for it in ceremonies of all kinds.
But in keeping with the march of time and changing imperatives, now garden clubs are educating people about the environment. If there ever was a cause that needs advocates that’s it. There are many small ways in which we can lessen our adverse impact on the world around us, and education is a big first step.

The Georgetown Garden Club’s annual spring Garden Tour raises the funds that enable this garden club to do these things. The club steps in when funds are needed for outdoor community projects.

A new book on the lovely small gardens of Georgetown, and some large ones too, with glorious photographs that capture our spirit of place, is planned to come out next spring. In time for the Garden Tour on May 9th.

See you there.

Anticipating Holiday Crime and Reporting Crimes Online

Jennie Buehler - Public Safety Coordinator

As holiday shopping begins in earnest, remember that unfortunately this is also the time of year for increased crime. It has already been a challenging year and the month of December will most likely see more incidents. CAG’s Public Safety co-chair John Rentzepis reports that in response to the recent increase in assaults, robberies, and thefts, MPD has deployed as many additional resources as possible in Georgetown. There has been a 200% increase in manpower, including use of tactical deployment units such as bicycle and undercover personnel. In addition, MPD met with Georgetown University police to discuss ways to effectively communicate safety messages to students, including basics such as keeping windows, doors, and cars locked.

Dozens of residents attended the Public Safety meeting in November organized by Public Safety volunteer Maggie Handle at the Safeway Café. A lively and informative discussion was held with Metropolitan Police Department Sgt. Corey and Officers Atkins (east village), Lowry (south of M St) & Corchado (west village). Numerous items were discussed including:

CAG Public Safety Block Captain email network: The Georgetown community has the most vibrant Block Captain network in the city with over 80 captains disseminating vital public information to neighbors via email. If you’d like to be added to the Public Safety block captain network, please contact CAG (202.337.7313 or cagmail@cagtown.org to be connected with your block captain. Should your block not have a block captain CAG will connect you with one near your home.)

911: Call 911 to report all suspicious behavior and criminal activity. 911 is the ONLY way to have police dispatched in Washington DC. 911 dispatchers are not police officers but civilians working for Homeland Security. To improve police response, emphasize the need for urgency when speaking with a 911 dispatcher; use phrases like “Crime in progress” or “The suspect is on the scene” or “I fear for my safety.”

Camera Project: CAG is looking for residents to host a Public Safety camera on their home. Your request will be evaluated based on strategic location (Georgetown egress or high crime area) and availability of Comcast internet service in your home. If you’re interested in hosting a camera contact CAG.

If you have the misfortune of being the victim of a crime, you can now access the MPD website and complete a police report yourself. According to Public Safety Committee co-chair Rich Hinds, the Citizens Online Reporting Tool (CORT) allows you to make quick reports for the following types of incidents: (1) lost property; (2) lost vehicle tags; (3) theft/theft from auto (except for credit cards, checkbook, SS card/number, and other forms of personal identification); (4) destruction of property; and (5) damage to property. Upon completion of your report, and once it is fully approved, you will receive a final police report case number and a link to print a copy for your records. This is useful for your insurance claim and it helps to create more accurate patterns and records of crime in Georgetown, in particular theft of packages. See mpdc.dc.gov for further details and steps involved to use CORT.

Parking Activity

Hazel Denton - Chair CAG Parking Committee

One of the most discussed, deliberated and debated issues in Georgetown is the focus of two very involved groups. A newly formed and energized Georgetown Parking Team has been formed by DDOT. The group is directed by three main assumptions: Residents should be able to park near their homes. Businesses must be able to send and receive goods easily, and their patrons not be challenged by parking restraints. An efficient multi-modal transportation system is critical for Georgetown.

As a first step, DDOT is creating a demographic parking summary for Georgetown, including a survey of surface parking spaces. It will be aided in this by work done by transportation consultants working for Georgetown University, who have done their own block by block count in the neighborhood around the University. The level of engagement is encouraging.

Also tackling the thorny parking issue is the Georgetown Community Partnership Transportation and Parking Working Group. A committee of the Georgetown Community Partnership (GCP), a collaboration of the University, ANC2E, and the Community, the group recently met with the GCP Communications Working Group. The purpose of this meeting was to kick off a fundamental initiative, namely to ensure that information on transportation options available to visitors and staff coming to the University or hospital is consistent, accurate, easy to use, and encourages use of public transportation. A recent review of the university website lacked this very crucial information. This will be a primary assignment for the Communications Group.
EVERY DOG WILL HAVE ITS DAY

Craig Wilson

Behind every successful man is a woman. Or so they say.

Dave Berkebile, owner of Georgetown Tobacco, just celebrated the 50th anniversary of his neighborhood institution on M Street. But his dog, Tallulah, a sassy nine-year-old Shih Tzu who lives with him and his wife Sandy on 30th Street, admits she can take little credit. She talked exclusively with CAG, using her mom as translator:

HOW OFTEN DO YOU GO INTO WORK WITH DAVE? Never.

DO YOU AT LEAST HAVE A PREFERENCE IN YOUR MEN? PIPE SMOKER? CIGAR?
Yes. I prefer cigars. It’s very mannish.

FAVORITE TRICK: Trick? I don’t do tricks. I behave. I’m a good girl.

FAVORITE RESTAURANT: Das Ethiopian on M Street. I like to sit outside and watch the world go by. I like attention wherever I go.

MARITAL STATUS: Single. And yes, I’m still a virgin.

BIGGEST TURN ON: Company. I’m very social. As I said, I like attention.

ODD FACT: I like to chase balls but I never bring them back. No one ever told me I was supposed to. Should I?

HAIR SALON: I go to Bogart’s with Mom, but my personal salon is so exclusive I’m not going to tell you where it is.

FAVORITE MEAL: Anything, really. I’m a bit of a garbage dog. I do love bananas. I’ve been known to climb on the kitchen table to get one.

FAVORITE PASTIME: Cruising the neighborhood for handouts. There’s a nice guy right around the corner who takes care of me. Milk Bone treats. Medium.

MORNING ROUTINE: I’m usually up at 5 and I slither into bed with the folks. Dad finally wakes up later, but I won’t say when. Let’s just say he’s not an early bird.

LOVES: The mailman if the door is open.

HATES: The mailman if the door is closed.

FAVORITE ROAD TRIP: Anywhere, really. I’m thrilled to get in the car. We often go to Shepherdstown, W.V. I love Bistro 112 there. Dogs can go in any room except the kitchen. I’m also heading to Florida soon. Can’t wait.

FAVORITE WALKS: The woods up in Glover Park. And the canal. I love the water.

WHAT SHE LOVES MOST ABOUT GEORGETOWN: The gingkos and their berries. The smell. I can sniff forever. It’s like perfume to me.

(A Georgetown pooch will be featured in this space periodically, and why not. They’re as much a part of the local scene as we are. Share your Georgetown dog’s story. For an interview contact Craig Wilson at craigwilsononolive@gmail.com)

The Georgetown Senior Center welcomes you

The Georgetown Senior Center provides so many good things to our community — recreation, stimulation, music, friendship and a delicious lunch. All these are available three times a week — Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays — at St John’s Church, 3240 O Street NW. The festivities begin at 11:30 with a session of seated stretching, followed by lunch and a program featuring a fascinating speaker or a musical performance.

New guests are warmly welcomed by the seniors and volunteers. Please join us whenever you can. Reservations aren’t necessary for the lunch, but are advised if you need transportation. A shuttle bus is available for door-to-door service. For further information, please call Janice Rahimi at 202-316-2632.

Purchasing Firewood and Protecting Our Ash Trees

Betsy Emes - Chair, Trees for Georgetown

A report from Trees for Georgetown’s consulting arborist, Keith Pitchford, tells us that the emerald ash borer (EAB) was found in Kenilworth Park in northeast Washington. This follows a federal quarantine applied to Washington, DC in 2011, by the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) of the US Department of Agriculture. The quarantine was applied at that time due to the presence of EAB in neighboring Maryland and Virginia.

This recent discovery in Kenilworth Park means that all residents of the District with ash trees on their property should consider control methods, or risk losing their trees to this damaging insect.

There is now a federal ban applied to the District that restricts the intrastate movement of firewood from all hardwood species, and also nursery stock, green lumber, waste compost and wood chips from ash species. Therefore, DO NOT purchase firewood of any species, or accept wood chips that contain ash parts, from any state outside of the District. Also, if you have an ash tree removed from your property, this wood and wood chips should not be removed from the District.

To read Keith’s entire report, including what you can do to protect an ash tree on your property, please go our website, www.cagtown.org and click on Trees for Georgetown.

Need a Bigger Closet? Rent The Runway!

VV Harrison

You can rent a house, a car, a bike, and now a new and interesting concept has been added to the rental business — you can actually rent a dress. Not just any dress, but one designed by one of the most famous designers in the country. Yes it’s true, Rent The Runway, at 3336 M Street, has come to Georgetown and when I stopped by the day before the grand opening, the building was in a state of chaos, walls being painted, buzz saws making themselves known, mirrors being hung, and racks of colorful dressed hiding behind partitions.

When I came back the following morning the store had been magically transformed and was completely operational. I spoke with Becky Hyman who told me the first shop opened in 2009 and that all the dresses come “directly from the designers”. The idea is to rent a dress for a special occasion, wear it, enjoy the thrill of being seen in something you might not be able to afford, and when the event is over, return it. They even rent wedding dresses. You can also rent accessories, like hand bags, necklaces, earrings and rings. They have two stores in New York and one in Las Vegas and now one down the street where you can select dresses by designers like Halston, Calvin Klein, Diane Von Furstenberg, Versace, Vera Wang, and many others at prices ranging from fifty to five hundred dollars. The Georgetown store has an inventory of fifteen hundred dresses, which come in three sizes: small, medium and large. The selection is wide and varied and includes coats and jackets, but if you’re unsure of exactly what you want, you can engage one of fifteen stylists at twenty-five dollars for a forty-five minute session.

When I asked why Georgetown was selected for the new store, the answer was surprising: “Because our virtual customer base from Georgetown is our largest.” Apparently The Runway does a big business on line, and now has a very attractive presence in our village. Their motto: “Think of us as your best friend with a much better closet” — and I think many of us will. The store is open seven days a week (10-8 Monday and Tuesday, 9-9 Thursday through Friday, 9-8 on Saturday, and 10-7 on Sunday) so stop in, look around, and picture yourself, at least for one brief shining moment, as one of Georgetown’s best dressed women!
